HAPPY NEW YEARS

The season of 1881 closed one of the most brillman and successful campaigns in the lastory of our trade. We congratulate our patrons and ourselves in multiclation of a fively and increa-ed Spiting Trade.

In order to meet the demand we have made extensive improvements in our room and otherwise extended our facil room and otherwise extended our facilities to present our spring offering of Select and Choice I OREIGN NOVEL. TIES to arrive about the Frast or Feastans. We will be able to please the most exthetic as well as the general class of trade. A great desideration among our people seems to be a cheap article in Clothing. There is no good in it We have tract it and found it don't pay. We will wager one of our $50 Overcoats will last three seasons fairly wear and look gented, while a $50 $30 Overcoals will list three seasons bard wear and look genteel, while a $20 Overcoal will hardly be recognized after one season's wear. Where is the economy in buying trash? Few percomonly in buying bach? I ew per-sons are competent judges of fine articles of Clothing done up in first class style; therefore, we invite special attention to our a stablishment, where can be found at all times the very best in the market, at prices as reasonable as can be expected. We are selling a few HEAVY WEIGHT

THE NEWSPAPER ALMANACS.

INDUSTRIAL REVIEW FOR NORTH AND SOUTH harper's New Edition of Goldsmith's Works, The almanac issued by the Philadelphia Times for 1882 is a particularly valuable political compendium, and a handbook of information of general interest. An examination of its contents reveals much that is indispensable to the politician, business man and intelligent observers who desire to keep themselves posted upon current events, besides, of course. the chronological features that are esteemed of special value by the housewife and the family circle, who find in its pages much that serves to direct essential affairs of the home. Comprised in its 112 handsomery proted pages are election returns of ever-present interest, national state and local; accurate reports of political conventions, some laws of general interest, lists of members of Congress and the Legislature, with complete organization of the national and state governments; accounts of the assassination of President Garfield, besides a vast amount of equally valuable matter all of which is admirably arranged under proper headings, making the volume a model work of reference, a timely and useful directory that should have permanent place in every household. It is edited, printed and published by the Times and sent prepaid to any address for lifteen cents.

The New York Tribune almanae, edited by that able politician and experienced journalist, Edward McPherson, clerk of the United States House of Representatives, is a perfect cyclopædia of political and general information. Its election tables and resume of the notable events of the year in every phase of activity are ndels in all respects. There are nine-ty-six pages of reading matter, printed in clear, legible type, and an attempt to indicate its many features of value would fall so far short of the real merits of the book that we can only advise persons desirous of keeping abreast of affairs of current interest to send twenty-five cents to the Tribune, New York, and receive the recompense of their investment in one of the most complete manuals of the kind that his been issued.

The Philadelphia Ledger almanae for this year is enclosed in a handsome illustrated and illuminated cover. This work, always a welcome visitor in every house hold, has long since become a home book of reference and a treasury of useful in. What would be have thought of it? and events. No further assurance is needed of the publisher's statement that neither mother and uncle that be went to Cork care nor expense has been spared to make | with a little kit resolved to sail away to it eminently trustworthy, after a glance through its well-stocked pages. The Ledger almanae is furnished free of cost to every subscriber of that excellent newspaper, and no copies are sold.

The Philadelphia Record almanac is as usual check full of information, political and general, and there is a well arranged chronological record of the leading events of the year, calendar of sports, directory of things familiar, &c. There are a number of beautiful engravings, and the work in its entirety is a positive credit to the enterprising newspaper by which it is published. The Record almanae is furnished grat's to its patrons.

By reason of the care which has been bestowed upon its preparation from year to year the Baltimore Sun almanae has attained the place of a standard and indispensable publication. For 1882 the generally every day, on the 9 o'clock train almanac contains seventy-six pages, and the record of a great variety of valuable facts, bearing upon matters of genera! public interest. The calendar and astro nomical data are given as heretofore, in addition to which the publishers bave had prepared expressly for this interesting department of the almanac such explanatory matter as will enable all to derive information and pleasure from a knowledge of of the decorations are finished, while in the heavenly bodies. Besides Goldsmith's letters it has an unpublished poem, is another special feature which makes the edition natable.

In all that Goldsmith wrote which was ot hack work, like his histories and his Amounted Nature—in all his works in which his genine had free play, there is almost no alloy. It is pure gold. What could we spare from The Traveller, from The Deserted Village, from The Vlcar. from The Citizen of the World? Yet personally the author of these works, the man whose very name is beloved, and over whose pages every successive generation hangs charmed, the gentle regician whose purifying and softening influence touches the universal human heart, is one of the most pathetic of historic figures. Penniless and homely, his face scarred with smallpox, awkward and tactless, and proud of a colored suit of clothes, yet as guileless and sweet-natured as a child, absolutely unsellish and generous, the equal companion of the most illustrious men, and beloved by children in the dreary London court, and by the poor women who sat weaping on the stairs when he lay dead at forty-six in his wretched chamber, Oliver Goldsmith is one of the most touching characters, and one of the true ber efactors of his kind. Think of Richard Cumber-
